WINTER PARK, FL - Blessed with ideal weather, a ready supply of construction materials and laborers and the financial and spiritual support of hundreds of loyal friends both in Uganda and Florida, the progress on The Home of the Holy Angels moves forward at a rapid pace.

The Home of the Holy Angels is an orphanage mission project in Kibale, Uganda which is being built in three phases. Phase One consists of educational, administrative and dormitory buildings to house up to 85 youths and their educators and support staff for children, aged kindergarten to 6 years. A year in design and planning, construction for Phase One was begun in July, 2008. Phase Two includes secondary educational and support buildings as well as a complete medical complex to provide important health and emergency services for these children and AIDS/HIV preventative treatment and education. Phase Three will include vocational education.

The project is important because it will directly and positively impact the youth of today and the future health and vitality of the community tomorrow. The AIDS/HIV epidemic is the cause of the community's and the country's high population of orphans. The care of the orphans is KUDU's primary mission.

The foundation for the first building of the campus was set in August, 2008 and walls went up immediately, as seen in these progress photos.

In August, Fr. Charles Nabwana, president of KUDU, Inc., attended the Uganda North American Association, UNAA, convention in Orlando, which was an opportunity for him to make vital networking contacts with ministers and visiting diplomats from Uganda.

"The meetings were very productive," said Fr. Nabwana. "The ministers I met with pledged their spiritual support to our project. I met with our local Bishop Thomas Wenski and shared with the ambassador of Uganda to the USA our vision for the orphans of Kibale."

Fr. Nabwana was also privileged to meet with the Hon. Maria Emily Lubega Mutagamba, Minister of Water and Environment of Uganda. Ms. Mutagamba is the first woman to be appointed Minister of Water in her country. She has also been President of the African Ministers' Council on Water for the last two years. She is a strong advocate for water issues in Africa and has been promoting a pro-water agenda at both national and international levels.

The Home of the Holy Angels is a registered 501-(c)(3) non-profit organization, registered in the state of Florida and all contributions are tax-deductible.

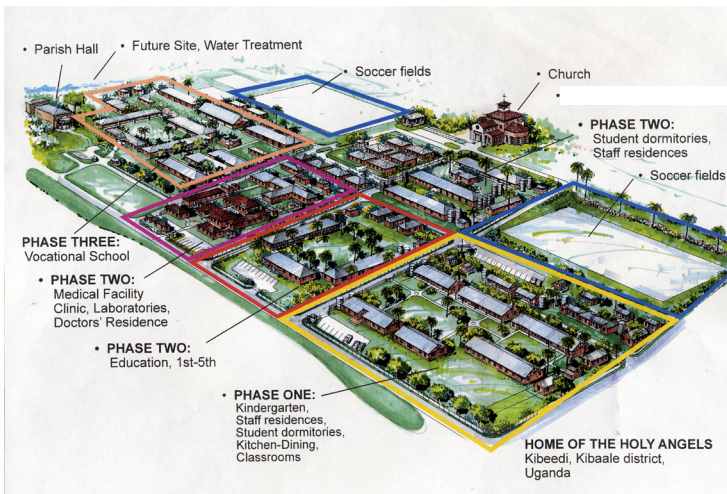

For more information, see www.helpkibale.org, or contact Fr. Charles Nabwana, 321-460-0940.

Bricklayers on the orphanage project have made fantastic progress since setting the foundation in August, 2008. The profile of the first building on the campus, the kindergarten classroom, is shown at the top of page, and above.

The campus grounds were cleared of the scrub growth and replaced with corn, which has already matured. The harvest will have future food value for the children and the community.
